Melissa is also a self-taught, practicing artist who owns and operates her own art studio, Creative Makes.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Lay out the corrugated board on a table or any flat surface, making sure the rigid side is facing up and tape to the surface to avoid movement.
2. Provide the students with a variety of washable paint colours and paintbrushes.
3. Encourage the students to dip the paintbrush into the paint and then paint onto the corrugated board.
4. Allow the students to explore and experiment by pressing the cardstock onto the paint-covered corrugated board, to create prints and patterns.
5. Show the students how pressing with different amounts of pressure can create different effects on the paper.
6. Encourage the students to try mixing colours or layering different colours on the corrugated board.
7. Once the students are satisfied with their creation, set it aside to dry.
8. Fold another piece of cardstock in half to create the card.
9. Carefully trim the painted artwork to the desired size and attach it to the front of the card using tape or a glue stick. Ask the students to write a message to their father or a fatherly figure in their life to show their love and appreciation for them.
10. Ask the students to present their card to their father or fatherly figures on Father's Day!

OPEN ENDED QUESTIONS TO ASK DURING THIS ACTIVITY

- What colours do you want to use for your painting today?
- How does it feel when you press the paint-covered corrugated board onto the paper?
- What patterns or designs can you create by using different amounts of pressure?
- Can you show me how you mix two colours together on the corrugated board?
- What are some new colours you have created?
- I wonder what your painting reminds you of?

OPTIONAL EXTENSION

You can also add additional art materials like stickers, markers, or crayons to further decorate their artwork before adding it to the cardstock. Inside the card, encourage the students to draw a picture of themselves with their Dad.
